Meeting on November 4 - Summarized Customer Notes

- Certain pages have too much scrolling and not enough clear text
    - Focus designing with legibility of a wide demographic in mind
    - Columns can work to reduce scrolling, as long as everything is visible and not too squished
    - Smaller pictures needed
    - Pick a similar pallet to what Envirocolletive has currently in the website, but continue playing with similar colours or other colours that compliment each other
- Make sure to utilise the graphics and images from the Pollinator to personalise the whole website
- Experimentation is key: we want to find something that gets Rob excited, and hopefully the users down the road too
- Be careful of doing too much on the Repair Cafe's booking page, as we know this space is dedicated for Bookly

Currently, not enough of the website is clear to determine how Rob feels about the design. We must come back and work hard to return in the right direction.
